

Presenting the Lords of Lords

The Hoardlands of Dukedomberg has always been ruled by a Lord of Lords, at least since the time that the collection of Hoards became a nation of sorts. One might think Hordes is more correct, but the regions became known as Hoards because the all hoarded what they had stolen from each other. Dukedomberg became the most powerful of all and dominates the others. Succession is normally male and dynastical (if anyone lives long enough). The Hoardlands are wild, unruly, savage and frequently one or more of the Hoards are in some form of hostility with the others. The dates are in MCO (Modern Cycles-of-Octaves).

Length of Reign	Dates	Number, Name & Honorary Title of the Lord of Lords	Notes
31	1064 – 1095	1 st Lord: Tyrannicus the Terror Weaver	Tyranny by name and tyranny by nature
24	1095 – 1119	2 nd Lord: Despoticus the Race Slayer	In fact a slayer of a great many things, but then he would have had a very long title
2	1119 – 1121	3 rd Lord: Balatro the Cruel	Be wary of a party invite
56	1121 – 1177	4 th Lord: Basil the Cheerful	Dangerous when whistling
78	1177 – 1255	5 th Lord: Hystericus the Comical	At least he thought he was if no-one did (though everyone always laughed)
97	1255 – 1352	6 th Lord: Canuteum the Turner of Tides	It didn't work
61	1352 – 1413	7 th Lord: Construssus the Bridge Builder	Actually deserved his honorary title, both in terms of relationships with Ephaleon and much of the Road of Water construction
38	1413 – 1451	8 th Lord: Harpenia Queen of the Succubae	Lord indeed, there was not much ladylike about her manners
114	1451 – 1565	9 th Lord: Ivex the Intellectual	The cleverest of all the Lord of Lords ever to sit on the throne and commensurately able in the world of politics and intrigue
81	1565 – 1646	10 th Lord: Serendipitum the Bringer of the Holies	Tried to carry on from Ivex and introduced radical and large scale reforms to the Hoardlands
19	1646 – 1665	11 th Lord: Slidgis the Strange	There is strange, weird, peculiar – and then there was Slidgis
52	1665 – 1717	12 th Lord: Bodmol the Disgusting	Think of something bad – and make it worse
60	1717 -1777	13 th Lord: Morelogus – The Snivelling	For a weak-willed and ineffective Lord of Lords he lasted a surprisingly long time, more due to the benefits it brought to his court officials than anything else
25	1777 - 1802	13 th Lord: Foedus – The Rather Indecent	Best left to the imagination
21>	1802 >	14 th Lord: Cyril – The Stumpy	Ridiculed since birth, but now subjects and rivals are somewhat more discreet, or dead
